Closing the Institutional Capacity Gap – How TVET Institutions can Foster the Circular Transition

Terms of Reference

A. Background

There is a consensus that education and TVET systems will play a crucial role in the green transition, as they can equip learners with the skills, knowledge and expertise they will need to thrive in more sustainable societies. Nevertheless, while most of the literature has been focusing on what transition to a greener and circular economy will require in terms of new skills, qualifications, competencies, and how different jobs will become greener, little research has been conducted on how TVET institutions can practically implement those recommendations and what are the challenges they are facing and what are the capacities they need to support the circular transition.

Many TVET institutions face institutional gaps that limit their ability to effectively contribute to the green transition. These gaps may include a lack of appropriate curriculum and training materials, inadequate teacher training, limited access to green technology and equipment, insufficient funding and resources, and weak partnerships with industry. Addressing these gaps is critical to ensure that TVET institutions can effectively support the transition to a green and circular economy¹. The institutional gaps TVET institutions face are particularly pronounced in low- and middle-income countries, where access to resources and funding may be limited. However, addressing these gaps is essential for these countries to realise the full benefits of the circular transition, including job creation, improved public health, and economic growth².

Last year, UNESCO-UNEVOC implemented a project that supported the capacity building of TVET institutions. Specifically, it supported TVET personnel in raising their professional and institutional capabilities to adopt green and circular economy approaches for skills for employment and self-employment in green and circular economy jobs. The project created a preliminary source of information to understand the extent of awareness, existing knowledge, and capacity gaps in TVET institutions to effectively transfer the knowledge and skills needed to support circular economy jobs.

UNESCO-UNEVOC, with support from its donors, seeks to conduct a preliminary assessment of the institutional capacity gap to foster the green and circular transition that exists in TVET by engaging a think-tank and research organisation specialising in the topic of circular economy to support research and analysis. Through this study, UNESCO-UNEVOC aims to expand the baseline knowledge available to determine the areas of capacities within TVET systems that can provide enabling support to identify and develop demerging new green qualifications and competencies in TVET curricula or can be strengthened. The project seeks to examine the role of TVET institutions in implementing measures in TVET curricula to develop new green and circular qualifications and competencies, as well as uncover the existing capacity gaps and opportunities for strengthening.

Based on sample country analysis, the research aims to present a clear picture of the barriers to effective TVET institutions' implementation of circular approaches and inform policy and management decisions to ensure their effective contribution to the green transition.

In line with this context, considering UNESCO’s strategy for TVET (2022-2029) and given UNESCO’s priority on the Sub-Saharan region, the study will focus on institutions from Ghana, Kenya and South Africa because of the diverse TVET systems as the realities they present in terms of identifying barriers to implementation, the availability of institutional data based on the previous project and the diversified institutions of TVET that can provide multiple perspectives to the research.

B. Purpose of the assignment

The work described in this Term of Reference aims to support meeting the project objectives described above. Specifically, the study will concentrate on key questions important for this assignment which include but are not limited to answering the following research questions:

- What are the emerging green skills and the new green qualifications and competencies that need to be developed and embedded in the design or delivery of more circular TVET curricula?
- What areas of capacities are enabling or barring TVET systems from developing or strengthening new green and circular qualifications and competencies in existing TVET curricula?
- What barriers need to be addressed, and what capacities do existing institutions need to develop to support the implementation of new green and circular qualifications and competencies in TVET?

C. Tasks and expected outputs

The Contractor acknowledges and agrees that UNESCO will apply a policy of "zero tolerance" with regard to sexual exploitation and abuse of anyone by the Contractor, its employees, agents or any other persons engaged by the Contractor to perform any services under this Contract.

Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing:

(a) Sexual activity with a child (any person less than eighteen years of age), regardless of any laws relating to the age of majority or to consent, shall constitute the sexual exploitation and abuse of such person. Mistaken belief in the age of a child shall not constitute a defense under this Agreement.

(b) The exchange or promise of exchange of any money, employment, goods, services, or other thing of value, for sex, including sexual favors or sexual activities, shall constitute sexual exploitation and abuse.

(c) The Contractor acknowledges and agrees that sexual relationships between the Contractor's employees, agents or other persons engaged by the Contractor and beneficiaries of assistance, since they are based on inherently unequal power dynamics, undermine the credibility and integrity of the work of UNESCO and are strongly discouraged.

Reporting of allegations to UNESCO. The Contractor shall report allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse, of which the Contractor has been informed or has otherwise become aware, promptly to UNESCO, in line with its established reporting mechanism. To the extent legally possible, the Contractor will require its employees, agents or any other persons engaged by the Contractor to perform any services under this Contract, to report allegations of sexual exploitation and abuse arising in relation to this Contract directly to UNESCO.

This provision must be included in all sub-contracts or sub-agreements entered into under this Contract.

The Contractor shall notify UNESCO within five working days of any complaint by an individual in respect of his/her Personal Data. The Parties shall consult with each other before taking any action as a result of or in reaction to such complaint.

The obligations and restrictions in this Article shall be effective during the term of this Contract, including any extension thereof, and shall remain effective following any termination of this Contract, unless otherwise agreed between the Parties in writing.
